RE: Ruben Safir PhD Admissions
Letter or Recommendation

Dear Members of Faculty,

Hello, My name is Samir Iabbassen, and I am an adjunct professor at Long Island University in Brooklyn, NY. My area of teaching is Computer Sciences, especially architecture, object oriented programming and other areas of information systems. I am writing a letter of recommendation for Ruben Safir, who graduated from the LIU with an MS in Computer Sciences in May of 2017.

When Mr Safir entered our program, I was one of his first professors. Immediately it became clear that he was very excited learning about Information Systems. While some of his student skill sets were a little rusty, his learning skills were exceptionally sharp and his love of the topic always on display. It took a while for him to get his feet on the ground. I believe he had over a 20 year gap in attendance of school. But he dug through material, cross referencing it, digging through sources, unlike nearly any student I ever had. Unlike most other students, he seemed to almost function without concern for grades. His emphasis was always on learning.

Two years later he plodded the chair into giving classes that weren't part of our normal selection. One of those classes was parallel programming. I taught this class and he attended, but this time he was a much more mature student and his accumulation of knowledge and ability to cross pollinate and pool previous work into the current subject was very notable. He had turned into an outstanding student and outstanding learner. And this was reflected in his rising GPA through his time with us.

I highly recommend him for any academic program. He will make a long lasting and positive contribution to your program and prove an asset.

RE: Ruben Safir, Ph.D. Admissions
Letter of Recommendation

Dear Members of the Selection Committee,

It is my pleasure to write this letter in support of Mr. Ruben Safir's application to your Ph.D. program in Computer Science at Ariel University, Israel. I have known Ruben for about two years throughout his graduate studies at LIU Brooklyn as instructor, Acting Chair and then Chair of the Department of Technology, Innovation and Computer Science at LIU Brooklyn. I strongly recommend him to your Ph.D. program based on his extensive professional background and proven academic achievements.

As Chair, I had the privilege and opportunity to witness first hand his growth, passion for learning, quest for knowledge and dedication to conduct his Master's thesis research. In my graduate course on "Systems Analysis and Design" I was impressed by his inquisitive questions, insights into complex problems and technology trends, and solving abilities. He gained tremendous maturity and discipline in modeling, documenting, and presenting his solutions with the most appropriate software engineering techniques and tools. Subsequently, I had him in Operating Systems when his hacking abilities were put to use in dissecting the kernel code to examine process scheduling in Linux. His track record at LIU Brooklyn reflects his incredible transformation to a disciplined thinker and a practical problem solver. His thesis provides an exploration of Paleontology using graph theory, pattern recognition, and Artificial Intelligence and Expert Systems. He has shown an outstanding capacity for independent work.

During my meetings with Ruben, I have always found him to be incredibly professional, engaging, ambitious, hardworking, dedicated and passionate about his field of study and desire to give back to his community and be an agent of change and empowerment in Computer Science. He spends countless hours guiding undergraduate, graduate, and international students through their plans of studies; offering "tutoring" ; discussing the latest trends in Linux and Open Source Software Development. Ruben is truly an extremely gifted individual in engaging and building rapport with faculty, students, staff, and stakeholders of the institution. Many of the traits, which are at the core of his success, are on display in his strong professional and ethical conduct. Ruben has the right attitude and focus, maturity, and work ethics to meet the expectations of your Ph.D. program. Therefore, I strongly recommend him and offer my highest endorsement for his application to the Ph.D. in Computer Science at Ariel University.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions regarding Ruben's application.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, reading "Mohammed Ghriga". The script is cursive and fluid, with the first name "Mohammed" and the last name "Ghriga" clearly distinguishable.

Dear Ariel University Admissions,

I am a professor of Computer Science at LIU Brooklyn. I'm writing to recommend my M.S. student, Ruben Safir.

Ruben has been one of the most remarkable students in our program in years. He came to us with a varied background in technology, pharmacy, and the natural sciences. He's also keenly interested in art and technology policy. These experiences distinctly inform his approach to computing, lending a lively and compelling angle to discussions and avenues of inquiry.

His first course with me was about compiler design and implementation. This is a graduate-level elective, but has been offered only rarely due to low demand. Ruben recognized and respected the importance of the topic, and organized fellow students to lobby our faculty to open the course. He approached the readings, theory, and coding with gusto and kept me on my toes in lecture. His questions and reactions really sharpened my teaching, and the course as a whole was better thanks to his eager participation.

After that experience, Ruben pitched me a 'big idea' for an M.S. thesis. He had been following some paleontological work on updating the hypothesized phylogeny of Tyrannosaurs. The computational connections he wanted to pursue were two-fold: first, the graph theory algorithms involved in generating and evaluating evolutionary trees; and second, how techniques from Artificial Intelligence might be used to automate analysis of two- and three-dimensional scans of fossils.

Although intrigued, I was initially reluctant to advise this work because it is out of my usual research area (programming languages), and I already had an overloaded schedule. Ruben's enthusiasm for the topic eventually won me over, and I'm glad I said yes. We both learned a lot about parsimony algorithms and metrics, and about elements of image processing such as Hough transforms.

Now Ruben is seeking either continuing education – possibly leading to a doctorate – or a career that makes use of his strengths in software development and appeals to his varied other interests. He would be especially well-suited for a project that combines computing with the natural or life sciences, and with a team or adviser proficient in those areas.

If you have any further questions, I am best reached by email, whereby we could schedule a conversation as needed.

Sincerely,
