

Select Language

Powered by Google Translate

World of Coins » Collecting coins » Coin collecting » Collections and views on collecting » Attitudes towards judaism

Poll

If figleaf purporting bigotry by denying the holocaust?

Oh course

Yes, but he has an excuse

Yes, but he is a victim of generations of antisemitism... so there is that no - but he keeps moving this topic off the board to cover it up anyway

1 (100%)

0 (0%)

0 (0%)

0 (0%)

Total Members Voted: 1

LOCK VOTING

EDIT POLL

REMOVE POLL

« previous next »

Pages: 1 [2] Go Down

NOTIFY

MARK UNREAD

SEND THIS TOPIC

PRINT

Author

Topic: Attitudes towards judaism (Read 136 times)

radars_teddy and 0 Guests are viewing this topic.

radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #15 on: September 18, 2021,

05:57:34 AM »

Remove

Quote from: <k> on September 09, 2021, 03:20:11 PM

I have been a member of this forum since 2008. Nothing I have heard from Figleaf suggests that he is in any way racist or anti-Semitic

Well, now you have.

Quote

and certainly not in any way a Holocaust-denier.

Then he owes me and the general public an apology.

Quote

He has a Chinese wife and Kazakh in-laws. He himself was born in Amsterdam, not too long after the Second World War. And astonishingly, he personally knew Miep Gies, the woman who tried to save the Frank family. More astonishingly yet, he also knew Otto Frank, the father of Anne, after Otto had survived the concentration / extermination camps.

I don't care. I care about the inappropriate things he said. What he said was the misappropriation of statistics to create a false comparison. It is a LIE to say that the Jews weren't annihilated, and it is a lie to say that the Final Solution in the Netherlands should be understood in light that most people that died in the Netherlands in WWII wasn't Jewish, as if that should make the genocide any less significant, and ruthless, and that the Final Solution was just part and parcel of what would be normal to expect in a war, as if it was just another data point.

There was NOTHING left of Jewish Culture in the Netherlands after WWII. Nearly the entire Jewish community now in Amsterdam is from Israel, and there is almost no trace of Jewish life outside of Amsterdam.

It is also wrong to have moved this from the original thread that spawned it. I simply asked how he survived when the Final Solution was so efficient in the Netherlands. The response was a lecture about the Holocaust, an inappropriate one, and on a topic I am intimately familiar with, not from books, but from family members and the members of the community who survived in and lost their entire families and suffered from the trauma for their entire lives.

Report to moderator  166.84.1.3

 radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

 Figleaf

Administrator

Honorary Member

Posts: 32 996

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #16 on: September 18, 2021,
06:28:40 AM »

Remove

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=e7nTpuCZJTE>

Report to moderator  166.84.1.3

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #17 on: September 18, 2021,
10:15:07 AM »

I suppose you have had a strictly religious education. I haven't. My moral values are nevertheless just as good as yours, but they are different. I go by facts, figures and logic and I have shown you that the figures are from a good source. You have shown only emotion, sentiment and a total lack of understanding of a different approach than yours and you haven't posted a single figure that questions mine.

Your posts have been moved here because of your wild outbursts, based on nothing concrete. If you refuse to accept facts and figures, you may not expect that your emotional arguments have credibility.

Your latest posts are against one of the few rules this site has: "no personal attacks". Since you do not calm down and become more agitated in every post, I have closed this thread.

Peter

Report to moderator  Logged

An unidentified coin is a piece of metal. An identified coin is a piece of history.

 radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #18 on: September 18, 2021,

02:11:02 PM »

Remove

NOT acceptable. The thread was talking about WWII victory on the coin that the post was of Holocaust survivors that were freed, among OTHER images that were more iconic of the VE Day. It was ON TOPIC. This is not a good trend.

Report to moderator  166.84.1.3

 radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #19 on: September 18, 2021,

02:21:46 PM »

Remove

Quote

My moral values are nevertheless just as good as yours, but they are different. I go by facts, figures and logic and I have shown you that the figures are from a good source.

It is not logical to compare the rounding up and sending to cermatorias every Jew that they could lay hands on in the netherlands to the mortality data for the general population during WWII. That is not logical.

It is also not logical to remove images f the end of WWII from the thread discussing the design faults of a coin celebrating the end of WWII, especially since the current design was terrible in that it was not obviously descriptive of the subject. Freed Holocaust survivors though would be spot on and obvious for the coin.

These acts are personal attacks and against forum rules. Anything that disparaged the memory of the Holocaust and sweeps it under the rug is a personal attack.

Report to moderator  166.84.1.3

 Figleaf

Administrator

Honorary Member

Posts: 32 996

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #20 on: September 18, 2021,

03:31:16 PM »

Quote from: radars_teddy on September 18, 2021, 02:21:46 PM

It is not logical to compare the rounding up and sending to cermatorias every Jew that they could lay hands on in the netherlands to the mortality data for the general population during WWII. That is not logical.

For the record, the mortality figures are of war victims, not general mortality figures

Quote from: radars_teddy on September 18, 2021, 02:21:46 PM

It is also not logical to remove images f the end of WWII from the thread discussing the design faults of a coin celebrating the end of WWII, especially since the current design was terrible in that it was not obviously descriptive of the subject. Freed Holocaust survivors though would be spot on and obvious for the coin.

For the record, the coin is British. There was no persecution of jews in the UK during the second world war. The post was offensive to UK members.

Further posts implicitly or explicitly asserting that the only thing that matters about the second world war is the holocaust will be deleted altogether.

Live up to this: Facts always trump convictions on World of coins. You received a link to this thread when your membership application was approved. For the record: these rules apply to everyone, including to supporters of the Palestinian cause, also on this site. You are not persecuted here and there is nothing personal about this.

Peter

Report to moderator  Logged

An unidentified coin is a piece of metal. An identified coin is a piece of history.

 radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #21 on: September 28, 2021,

04:00:49 PM »

Remove

Quote from: Ukrainii Pyat on August 03, 2010, 06:40:54 PM

More than discriminating against any particular ethnicity or denomination - the fascists discriminated against freedom in Romania and even changed the government there a few times to suit their particular wants.

NO, that is wrong. The Nazi's specifically hated Jews and targeted them for extermination. It was core to their political theology and they used it to inflame populations and gain supporters, and Romanians lined up on that policy of Jewish extermination, as it was outlined in Mein Kampf and planned for in the Final Solution. This coin exposes the deep antisemitic root that existed and still exists in Romania.

The Romanian nation and the Germans were partners in the Final Solution.

Report to moderator  166.84.1.3

 radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #22 on: October 01, 2021,

04:52:43 AM »

Remove

Quote

It is not much different from being anti-muslim or anti-christian. Or anti-catholic or anti-protestant or anti-sunni or anti-shiite or anti-white or anti-black

That is wrong. Those groups, pose real political risks to the mainstream societies, and real violence. What was the risk that Jews posed to European society? Not a thing. And at the end they stuffed all the Jews they could get into Gas Chambers because bullets were too expensive, and burned the bodies in crematoriums. You continue to frame historical and even current antisemitism as just another normal run of the mill historical event. And you are wrong. There is one thing that the Muslims, Christians, Catholics, protestants, Sunnis and shites all agree on, and that they hate Jews.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=NnH-7DLISRk>

<https://azjewishpost.com/2019/he-posed-as-a-righteous-jewish-convert-for-19-years-then-he-wrote-a-2000-page-anti-semitic-screed/>

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=xBfZeRwiQwE>

« Last Edit: October 01, 2021, 05:27:53 AM by radars_teddy »

Report to moderator  166.84.1.3

 Figleaf

Administrator

Honorary Member

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #23 on: October 01, 2021,

09:50:31 AM »

Posts: 32 996

chrisild

Moderator

Honorary Member

Posts: 9 031

NW · DE · EU

radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

radars_teddy

Senior Member

Posts: 125

Contrary to what you implicitly assume, Judaism is not the be-all and the end-all of global history. Worse, you present your opinion as the one and only truth. That quote is not wrong. Islam was scientifically more advanced than Christianity until the Mongols destroyed Baghdad and its house of learning. It is something you disagree with. You have the right to disagree and have your own opinion. You do not have the right to tell others what and how to think.

Peter

Report to moderator Logged

An unidentified coin is a piece of metal. An identified coin is a piece of history.

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #24 on: October 01, 2021, 01:25:01 PM »

Quote from: radars_teddy on October 01, 2021, 04:52:43 AM

That is wrong. (...) And you are wrong.

And your broad generalizations are what, right? Think again. 😊 Better yet, let's talk about coins in the forums that are about coins.

Report to moderator Logged

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #25 on: Today at 01:53:48 AM »

Remove

They are not broad generalizations. They are historically correct facts. My favorite thing is to go to Granada Spain where they talk about their Jewish culture... but they have no Jews! They are all DEAD and the cemetery is now a children's playground and major Synagogue is converted to a Cathedral. 800 years of Jewish history ... POOF into the flames of the Spanish Inquisition.

Report to moderator 166.84.1.3

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #26 on: Today at 02:21:09 AM »

Remove

Quote from: Figleaf on October 01, 2021, 09:50:31 AM

Contrary to what you implicitly assume, Judaism is not the be-all and the end-all of global history.

But it MIGHT be. It is certainly one of the most important loci of Human history and this has been proved, generation after generation. Not that we are discussing that. What we are discussing is the fact that the phenomena of worldwide antisemitism is unique and culminated with the annihilation of Jewish culture in most of the world, especially in the Shoah during WWII. The Nazi Final Solution was a successful political program that fed their successful conquests of Europe and sparked WWII. And almost without exception, the entire world collaborated with them.

This is just another attempt to frame those facts in a way to de-legitimize the Holocaust. Comparing the Nazi Final Solution to the terror that Genghis Khan posed to Europe and China is just dishonest.

Report to moderator 166.84.1.3

Administrator
Honorary Member

Posts: 32 996

Re: Attitudes towards judaism

« Reply #27 on: Today at 10:37:02 AM »

First you call the persecution of jews unique, then you prove your ignorance of what you are talking about.

Quote from: radars_teddy on Today at 02:21:09 AM

This is just another attempt to frame those facts in a way to de-legitimize the Holocaust. Comparing the Nazi Final Solution to the terror that Genghis Khan posed to Europe and China is just dishonest.

Genghis killed enormous amounts of Chinese and Arabs, but he was never in Europe. The mongols were, but he was dead at that time. Genghis killed whole towns, men, women, children. Once again, your argument is that killing Jews is different from killing other humans. You will never understand history and sink into extremism if you do not accept reality. Killing is killing and the religion of the dead is not relevant.

Posts not relevant to thread subject split off.

Peter

Report to moderator Logged

An unidentified coin is a piece of metal. An identified coin is a piece of history.

Pages: 1 [2] Go Up

NOTIFY

MARK UNREAD

SEND THIS TOPIC

PRINT

« previous next »

World of Coins » Collecting coins » Coin collecting » Collections and views on collecting » Attitudes towards judaism

MOVE TOPIC

LINK TO CALENDAR

Jump to: