Non-relevant post re-located after member complaint.

An unidentified coin is a piece of metal. An identified coin is a piece of history.

NOT acceptable. The thread was talking about WWII victory on the coin that the post was of Holocaust survivors that were freed, among OTHER images that were more iconic of the VE Day. It was ON TOPIC. This is not a good trend.

My moral values are nevertheless just as good as yours, but they are different. I go by facts, figures and logic and I have shown you that the figures are from a good source.

It is not logical to compare the rounding up and sending to cermatorias every Jew that they could lay hands on in the netherlands to the mortality data for the general population during WWII. That is not logical.

It is also not logical to remove images f the end of WWII from the thread discussing the design faults of a coin celebrating the end of WWII, especially since the current design was terrible in that it was not obviously descriptive of the subject. Freed Holocaust survivors though would be spot on and obvious for the coin.

These acts are personal attacks and against forum rules. Anything that disparaged the memory of the Holocaust and sweeps it under the rug is a personal attack.
